Tigers in a number of important contests in which he has taken part.

The new Tiger leader began his feetball career here in 1920, when he played end on one of the best freshman teams that has represented Princeton since the war. Last season he was regular varsity end, and it was his brilliant forward passing which paved the way for Princeton's touchdowns in the victory bver Harvard.

This fall he was first shifted to the backfield where he might work beside Jack Cleaves and become more of a threat with his deadly passing. However, after the Tiger line had been riped up in several games he was sent in as left guard. His passing in the Chicago game was the outstanding feature of the victory. In that contest he was injured to such an extent that he was able to participate in the Harvard and Yale games for only a short time when his passes were needed to stem the Crimson and Blue onrushes.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 7.—Corcoran's fine riding featured to-day's racing at Jefferson Park. This boy, who is winning a great following, in four mounts won two races, finished second in another and again took the third end of the purse in his other start.

Corcoran had the leg up on Admirer, the favorite of the first race, which finished third; he rode Machiavelli, which was beaten in the last stride after setting the pace, in the second. Corcoran scored with Marie G, in the third and landed brackets with Ablaze in the fifth.

The results:
